Regarding: Festival and Multimedia Exhibition »Transitions« - Jewish Solidarity and Resistance

Asylum Arts is very pleased to be working with DAGESH – jüdische Kunst im Kontext as part of the cultural programme of the multimedia exhibition »Transitions« that will run at the Jewish Museum Berlin and Jewish Museum in Amsterdam as well as go on tour across Germany and Europe as part of the DAGESH art's education programme addressing young people. After our very successful partnership over the past five years, we know that our continued collaboration will be of great value to the cultural field. We share a strong belief in the importance and power of arts and culture, and supporting the voices of Jewish artists, and I hope we can bring this work to additional audiences through this project.

Asylum Arts supports contemporary Jewish culture on an international scale, bringing greater exposure to artists and cultural initiatives and providing opportunities for new projects and collaborations. Asylum Arts, a global network of Jewish artists, currently with 676 members in the Americas, Israel, Europe, Australia and Africa, engages audiences with Jewish ideas and community through the vibrant Jewish and Israeli cultural landscape. We have created this international network through facilitated gatherings to build community, and by sparking action through small grants. We empower artists and cultural organizations to create experiences to broaden the impact of Jewish culture. Asylum Arts is based in Brooklyn, New York: <https://www.asylum-arts.org/about>
